NATIONAL TREE DAY – JULY 27

Planet Ark's National Tree Day started in 1996 and has grown into Australia's largest community tree planting and nature care event. It's a call to action for all Australians to get their hands dirty and give back to the community.

Since 1996 28 million trees have been planted. There are lots of ways for you to be involved in greening your community and making a difference to your local environment. Discover the numerous community planting events taking place around Australia here.

INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIP DAY – JULY 30

Friends are the family we choose. Celebrated worldwide, International Friendship Day reminds us of the importance of friendship. Create a card, bake something, spend some time together, or call an old friend. There are so many ways friends can be celebrated. Let a friend know how much they mean to you today!

ZUCCHINI PANCAKES

FREEZABLE | MAKES Approx 16

INGREDIENTS

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|----------------------|
| 1 cup wholemeal SR flour | 1 egg |
| 1/2 tsp baking powder | zest of 1 lemon |
| 1 1/2 cups buttermilk | olive oil, to fry in |
| 1 medium zucchini, grated | |
| 1/2 cup basil leaves, finely chopped | |

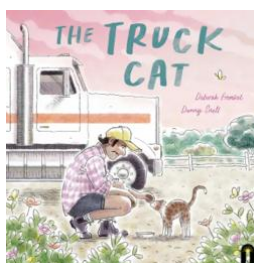

METHOD

Place the flour and baking powder into a large bowl and whisk to combine, creating a well in the centre. Place the egg and buttermilk into the well of the dry ingredients and whisk until a smooth batter is formed. Gently fold through the zucchini, lemon zest and basil.

Heat a non-stick frying pan over low to medium heat and grease it with a little olive oil. Place heaped tablespoons of the batter onto the pan and cook for 2-3 minutes, or until bubbles begin to appear on the surface of each pancake. Gently flip and cook for another 1-2 minutes, or until golden.

Place the pancakes onto a plate lined with kitchen paper and continue cooking until no batter remains.

HEALTH & SAFETY: Sunscreen Isn't Just for Summer: Why Winter Sun Safety

As the temperatures drop and winter sets in, it's natural to think less about sun protection. However, in Australia, the sun's ultraviolet (UV) radiation remains a year-round concern, even on cool or cloudy days. For young children, whose skin is particularly sensitive, consistent sun safety practices are crucial throughout all seasons.

Understanding UV radiation in winter

UV radiation is not dependent on temperature. This means that even during winter, when the sun feels less intense, UV rays can still cause skin damage. In fact, UV levels can be deceptive; they often remain high enough to warrant sun protection. In many parts of Australia, including cities like Sydney and Brisbane, the UV Index frequently reaches levels of 3 or higher during winter months, which is sufficient to cause skin damage over time.

The impact on children's skin

Children's skin is more delicate and susceptible to UV damage. Research indicates that excessive UV exposure during childhood significantly increases the risk of developing skin cancers, including melanoma, later in life. Establishing sun-safe habits early on not only protects children now but also instills behaviours that can lead to healthier outcomes in adulthood.

Sun safety tips for winter

1. Daily Sunscreen Use: Apply a broad-spectrum sunscreen with at least SPF 50 to all exposed skin areas, even on overcast days.
2. Protective Clothing: Dress children in long-sleeved shirts, pants, and wide-brimmed hats to shield their skin from UV rays.
3. Seek Shade: Encourage play in shaded areas, especially during peak UV times between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.
4. Use Sunglasses: Protect children's eyes with sunglasses that meet Australian standards for UV protection.
5. Check UV Levels: Utilize resources like the Bureau of Meteorology's UV Index forecasts or the SunSmart app to stay informed about daily UV levels in your area.

Setting a lifelong example

By prioritizing sun safety year-round, parents and caregivers set a powerful example for children. These practices not only safeguard their immediate health but also lay the foundation for a lifetime of sun-smart behaviours.

Remember, the sun doesn't take a winter break, and neither should our commitment to protecting our children's skin.

Check your skin for early signs of skin cancer

Keeping an eye on your own skin is just as important as protecting your children's. Regular skin checks can help detect early signs of skin cancer, when treatment is most effective. Here's a simple guide you can follow at home:

The ABCDEs of Melanoma:

Look out for any spots, moles, or freckles that show:

A - Asymmetry: One half looks different from the other.

B - Border: Edges are irregular, ragged, notched or blurred.

C - Colour: Uneven colouring with shades of brown, black, red, white, or blue.

D - Diameter: Growing spots, typically larger than 6mm, but melanomas can be smaller.

E - Evolving: Any change in size, shape, colour, or new symptoms such as itching or bleeding.

Other Warning Signs:

New spots appearing on the skin. A sore that doesn't heal. Lumps or red, scaly patches. Changes in existing moles.

When to See a Doctor:

If you notice any of these changes, it's important to see your GP or a skin specialist. Many skin cancers can be treated successfully if found early.

Make Skin Checks a Habit: Check your entire body every 3 months including your back, scalp, soles of your feet, and under nails. Use a mirror or ask a partner to help check hard-to-see areas.

Remember: Sun safety today, skin checks tomorrow — both are key to lifelong skin health.

Counting Songs

The rhythmic patterns and repetition in counting songs help children grasp the sequence of numbers. By singing along and moving to the beat, children naturally absorb counting. Singing while counting is perfect for auditory learners.

Songs like Five Little Ducks, Ten in the Bed, Alice the Camel, The Ants Go Marching, and Five Little Fish are great for practicing counting in a fun and musical way. There are many songs available to support your child; simply Google 'counting songs for preschoolers'.

FOCUS: 10 Emotion-Coaching Phrases to Use When Your Child is Upset

“When little people are overwhelmed by big emotions, it’s our job to share our calm, not join their chaos.” – L.R. Knost.

When our kids are upset and need us the most, these are the exact moments we aren’t prepared for - the moments when we are tired, stressed, sad, or triggered. It is also exactly at those moments when our children need us the most. To be able to lead them through the emotion, through the storm, to be their emotion-coach. It’s our job to be accepting of the emotion, while at the same time teaching them how to handle those emotions. To coach our child through their feelings, from experiencing those feelings to expressing them. Our words to our kids when they are upset can either break them down or build them up. These phrases will build your child’s emotional intelligence. These are soul-building phrases

1. It’s okay to be upset — it’s good to let it out. As your child’s emotion-coach, the first thing you want to teach them is that emotions are meant to be experienced, and that their feelings need to be felt. It seems like you are mad; it’s okay to be mad. It’s good to let that anger come out. Your face/body looks sad. It’s okay to feel sad. It is sad to say goodbye.

2. I hear you — I’m here for you — I’ll stay with you. The best gift you can give to another human is to stay with them in their emotion. To hold that emotion with them. That is something we should also give to our children. To simply be with them in that emotional space. To be there. You are upset, let’s sit here for a moment. I’m with you, I’ll stay with you — it’s okay to feel _____. I won’t leave you.

3. It’s okay to feel how you feel. It is not okay to _____.” Sometimes it is necessary to use a very clear limit in how our child expresses their emotions. It isn’t the emotion itself that needs to change, but rather how they are expressing it. You look like you’re really angry. It is okay to be angry. It is not okay to hit. I will not let you hit. Let’s go over here together, and you can be angry. This is a very clear statement: hitting is not okay. As your parent, I won’t allow you to hit. I will help you regulate your anger. Being angry is okay, but hitting is not okay. Taking a break when we are angry, walking away for a moment, is a good way of regulating anger. You are teaching your child to give themselves a little space to breathe and time to gain perspective.

4. How you feel right now won’t last forever. It’s okay to feel how you are feeling. It will pass, and you will feel better again soon. In-the-moment your child feels (and acts) as if their entire world is ending. Their emotions are overwhelming, and they feel that they will never feel better again, which only exacerbates their feelings. Reminding them that their emotions will pass will help them and potentially lessen the intensity of those emotions in the first place!

5. Let’s take a breath, take a break, sit down, pause for a minute... It is a hard thing to do to sit with an emotion. To feel it — live in it. However, if we allow ourselves to be present with our feelings, then we can release them more easily. A key part of being your child’s emotion coach is simply teaching them that experiencing and feeling the emotion helps us to let it go.

6. You are good and kind. Being dysregulated is not being bad. Being angry or frustrated is not being bad. Yet, sometimes when we are emotional, we don’t always make the best choices. Our kids may make mistakes or bad choices, but that is how they act, not who they are. This is a crucial message when we emotion-coach our kids.

7. I’ll be over here when you need me. I am all for validating and acknowledging children’s emotions, but sometimes kids escalate their emotions for attention. This is a big clue-in for parents that your child needs some one-on-one time. But not right now, later when things are calm again. You can still acknowledge your child’s emotions while giving them a chance to regulate themselves. “I can see you are really upset about this. It’s okay to be upset. It doesn’t seem like what I am saying is helping. You remember what to do when you’re upset, and you remember how to calm down. I’ll be over here when you need me.”

8. Let’s have a Do-over! Sometimes, everyone needs a chance to reset. Sometimes kids know they have messed up, and they want to save face; they want a chance to do it better.

9. What can we learn from this? What is the lesson in this? Teaching our children that there is a valuable lesson to be learned when we struggle is crucial. There is a lesson to be learned from our pain, disappointment, and anger. The problems that are hard to solve lead to opportunities.

10. You’ll Remember Next Time. When your child does something they shouldn’t do, and you correct their behaviour, say this. Or when you’ve worked through a tantrum and taught them better ways to express their emotion, before they go on to the next thing, say, “You’ll remember next time.” That one simple phrase communicates so much to children. It tells them that their failure today isn’t a permanent failure and that they can change.

EMBRACE THE OUTDOORS

Take advantage of the winter season to engage with nature and enjoy outdoor activities whenever possible. Spending time outdoors not only benefits your physical and mental well-being but also fosters a connection with the environment.

Consider activities like hiking, camping, or simply going for walks in nature to appreciate the beauty of the season.

Sunlight is an essential source of vitamin D, which plays a crucial role in maintaining overall health. Despite the cooler temperatures, try to spend time outdoors during daylight hours to soak up the sun’s rays. Exposing your skin to sunlight, even for short periods, can help boost your vitamin D levels, improve mood, and support healthy skin.

BIG PAINTING

If you let the possibility of mess stop you from enjoying art with your child, you will miss all the fun!

You will need:

Washable paint
Roll of art paper
Brushes (or not)
Paint cups/ paper plates
Bucket of water and a towel

Set up:

1. Choose a space in your home that you don't mind getting a little messy. On a grass space or on your fence. Use water based washable paint and everything can be hosed away.
2. Roll out paper or attach paper to a fence.
3. Pour out paint into cups or plates and lay out brushes or maybe just use hands.
4. Set clear rules, for example: painting should only be done on the paper, once you are finished wash your hands in the bucket.

How to create:

No rules, let your kids create to their hearts content. You could challenge them- Ask how high can you reach to paint? Can you paint a huge circle? Can you paint with both hands at the same time?

Have fun!

Get ready for Child Care Subsidy balancing this tax time.

If you get Family Tax Benefit (FTB) or Child Care Subsidy (CCS), there may be things you need to do before Centrelink can balance your payments.

Centrelink start balancing FTB payments from early July and CCS payments from mid-August.

Before Centrelink can balance your FTB and CCS, you may need to lodge a tax return with the Australian Taxation Office. It's a good idea to wait until late July for your information to pre-fill in myTax.

If you don't need to lodge, please notify us and confirm your family income for the 2024-25 financial year. You can do this online.

If you had a partner during the financial year, we also need their income details.

Balance Beam

Short simple activities to get some active minutes in the day.

Draw a line on the ground with chalk and you've got an instant balance beam. Then, have your child walk along the beam, jump along the beam, walk heel-to-toe from one side to the other, walk backwards, and (for kids who are older) do cartwheels or hop. You can also make this more difficult by drawing a squiggly line on the ground to do the same movements.
